Created in 2011, the Top 7 is composed of the seven nations having accumulated the most points in the ranking over the three last editions of the Coupe du Monde de la Pâtisserie*.

These seven countries are automatically qualified for participation in the following edition of the contest and are required to hold a national selection event to determine the composition of their team.

The contest rules and regulations stipulate that the country that wins an edition may not take part in the following edition, and cannot therefore be included in the Top 7 the year of its victory. Italy was the winner of the 2015 event and will not take part in the 2017 edition of the Coupe du Monde de la Pâtisserie.

* For nations that won during this period, the ranking is established based on the three previous participations.

Top 7 for the 2017 edition

The countries that compose the Top 7 for the 2017 edition are as follows (alphabetical order) :

- France,
